Akasha

History/ Background.

Akasha is the Sanskrit word for "sky," "space" or "ether." It is the ether that was once believed to be the pervasive essence of the universe. Indian mystics refer to the Akashic Record, a universal field of information similar to Jung's concept of the Collective Unconscious, often described as a universal museum/ library of human knowledge and memories.

In the early 1900s, Nicola Tesla, father of modern communications technologies, identified an information field at the heart of the universe. Comparing this field to Akasha, he claimed that this force field was fundamentally creative, creating matter when cosmic energy interacted with it.

In 2004 a book by Ervin Laszlo, "Science and the Akashic Field: An Integral Theory of Everything" suggests the existence of a field of information as the substance of the cosmos. He calls this information field the "Akashic field" or "A-field". He suggests that the "quantum vacuum" is the fundamental energy and information-carrying field that informs not just the current universe, but all universes past and present (collectively, the "Meta-verse").

László believes that such an informational field can explain why our universe appears to be fine-tuned as to form galaxies and conscious life forms; and why evolution is an informed, not random, process.

Archetypal Energy

The space where all human and cosmic knowledge(data), understanding exists. Akasha is the field that surrounds the void. When Akasha interacts with Fohat matter is formulated in a very specific way. Akasha and Fohat are similar and different. Where Fohat is the electrical encoded light and the message from prime directive (prime creator) , Akasha is the place within creation where all previous, concurrent and future directives are stored, including the resultant events, happenings, outcomes and new questions asked as a direct result of the collective multi-verse experience. This Akashic data is analogous to analogue or digital data contained in the software used in a computer.

Be aware that akasha is a space in-between time and physical reality, yet it permeates both. Look back what has been accomplished through time in your present reality and multiply this data many, many times over and you will understand the reality or the space that is Akasha. It is a field beyond time, yet it affects time. It affects it because it permeates the fabric of creation the way a beautiful gold thread can be inter woven with a wool thread to create a shimmering woollen garment. Separate to time Akasha may be, but able to act upon time it is also. Feel the thread of time loosen its grip upon you as you become more aware of Akasha, that is the stream of conscious knowledge which stands apart from time. Forgive us for labouring this point, it is just that we wish to loosen the grip of historical data, you are so fond of on your planet, which is sometimes the root of all your "evil". You see a great deal of your subconscious beliefs and programming stem from the collective historical imprinting, within your human DNA which has been imprinted there as a result of the experiences (historical memory) of the human race.

When one wishes to free oneself from collective genetic memory (human collective Karma)

one must learn to access Akashic data minus the historical impact or repercussive response on the collective psyche and DNA matrix. Remember DNA is primarily like any other object within the universe composed of energy. Your scientists go to such lengths to document its exact structure which is marvellous, however it needs to be remembered that this structure is totally malleable and changeable. In fact as one accesses the history from the future, through accessing the Akashic field one can morph into the very sort of creature or being which represents the evolutionary solution to a problem or challenge. So by accessing the place in the story of earth or your personal life where you have accomplished what you seek you become through changes in your DNA the very solution you seek. This is precisely why changing DNA without first changing Karmic layout is ineffective.

But how can we move forward in time you ask. The awareness of time on your planet is highly ideological in that it is somewhat theoretical and hopeful at the same time. You believe that time is forever moving forward like a straight line. Yet if you watch nature and her cycles, you will note how everything somehow repeats itself over and over again. Why do so many fear or ignore the concept of Karma; repetitive life cycles and opportunities for change and evolution, when it is so obviously apparent within the universe? Science often speaks of how energy cannot be created nor destroyed, but simply converted from one form to another, surely this is simply all that reincarnation and Karma then proposes.

Let us now look back on Akasha and the Field or the Space, dimension of Akasha. Can you understand how preposterous it would be if the process of creation kept no records of every event, every action or proposed action somewhere safe. Do you now register how inefficient and chaotic the workings of such a creative machine would be. Think of it this way, how useful would a computer be to you if it had no programmes, hardware or software. Think for an instant how useful the process of educating students might be if every teacher who taught a class had no training, no syllabus or curriculum to work with. What would an exam test? What would a university credential be worth or represent?

Knowledge and information are important in your world, do you believe for an instant that the larger workings of the universe would be devoid of such data and record keeping? Unlikely is it not?

So all that remains for us to truly understand how Akasha operates is to ponder how it works and what it originates from. Do not be afraid to probe the concepts of time and space available within your current science. Because Akasha, unlike the other substances or materials of creation is very closely aligned and similar in nature to the substance of brain matter and the electrical conductivity patterns of your human brain.

Grey matter and white matter are different within the brain yet they originate from the same substance. They function differently. One is capable of supporting nerve conduction, that is the transference of information from one place to another whilst one is the original place where thought arises, the field where thought go to ground in order to flourish and grow. Grey matter is where original thought arises, whilst white matter is responsible for nerve conduction. So one can compare grey matter to Fohat and white matter to Akasha. Brainwave electrical impulses are dependent on the chemical charge which arises from the chemical nature of certain cells in the brain. This is why nutrition and adequate cell salt intake are so important for all those who partake in important or heavy duty mental activity. Human channels and intuitive often get headaches with prolonged work sessions precisely for this reason. They often experience increased mental activity, through increased nerve conductivity and action, which can deplete both protein and cell salts in their body and brain. The resultant brain fag or headaches is a result of this depletion.

When nerve function is slow, brain function is affected as is every system in the body. The elixir enhances the movement of Fohatic/Akashic energy across the brain, thus enhancing brain function and intuition or “knowingness”.

The brain stem is where nerve function is least effective in a lot of individuals. This is where the ancestral brain is found and where DNA damage is prevalent. When individuals are sick this area is usually the most damaged. This then means access to raw data (new signals) are being hampered by events recorded in the brain stem the brain’s Akashic file. It is somewhat like the save button/ function on your computer.

Understand that the computer that is the brain is similar to the computer that is the universal mind each pattern in the universe (archetype) is simply a programme of recorded data within the holographic field that is Akasha. This field permeates space and non-space, matter and anti-matter but it is not the void which is the pre-matter you have termed Protyle. That is the emptiness before it all began, where it all came from and where it eventually goes back.

When life began on your planet the primordial ooze from which all life was begotten was simple in structure but even this had the memory of previous epochs and future epochs. Annihilation and destruction are not necessary if you understand the nature of creation. Life begets life . The seed becomes the life form which resets itself , reabsorbs itself once it has left behind the instructions of where it came from, what it accomplished and where it went. You understand the cycle of Karma is a spiral which loops upon itself over and over again. Know that the seed from which each epoch springs forth from having left the fractal shell of creation is containing of data from the cosmic library we have called here; Akasha. Understand this message well. When life began on the planet it already knew where it was going. Randomness and chaos do not exist as such. They are simply a superficial gleaming by the human mind which does not yet see the full web of creation and therefore the full weave of all the events/ processes within creation and their interrelationships. So Apocalyptic thoughts are ignorant thoughts which mirror a mind devoid of clarity and full access to Akasha. Fear and financial motivation is often the driver of those who shout doomsday prophecies from rooftops. Ignore them and you do yourselves great service.

Be free instead with access to Akasha as you now better understand the lessons from the past.

Let go the feeling of dread that is companion of those who have yet not realised that creation is organised and ordered yet free. By that we mean that at any point in time it has access to data collected from multiple time-scapes which it can use to create better outcomes. The brain has a similar process and in fact what makes the human brain so powerful is the formidable ability of its basic unit, neuron to integrate information from myriad sources. Every neuron receives nerve impulses from several thousand other neurons.

Personal memory is very similar to the collective memory of Akasha. As an individual begins to access Akasha through intuition, meditation, contemplation or inspiration, so do they begin to feel the burden of the collective undesirable history of collective existence. Feel free from this burden of negative memory or of blockages in your collective past when you take the elixir of Akasha. Not as specific as personal karmic clearings of your own karmic files, but of great value in liberating you from collective limiting memories, such as cultural, gender specific and racial karma. The elixir of Akasha also will enhance your ability to access data from the field on any subject or occurrence of your choice when taken over an extended time.
